Faculty Development Newsletter

December 1, 2020

Dear faculty,
Hooray! You've almost made it through the fall semester. We look forward to having you join us for more virtual professional development opportunities during the spring semester – keep an eye out for registration opportunities when we return from break. In the meantime, please see information on other important opportunities for faculty below.

Interested in presenting a Faculty Food for Thought or Brown Bag session next academic year? Visit the links above for more information.

Pivot Pedagogy Spring Semester Warm-Ups
These 60-minute, informal, discussion-based virtual sessions are centered on themes that emerged from the recent Pivot Pedagogy questionnaire responses. Faculty are invited to share approaches, ask questions, and learn new techniques that support student learning and engagement in alternative course formats such as online, hybrid, and hyflex.
Please register for each session you wish to attend by clicking on the links below:

- Promoting Online Student Engagement - Wednesday, January 20, 1:00 p.m.

Other Resources for Faculty

Virtual consultations and support are available by the Center for Academic Technology. To honor social distancing, CAT invites instructors to schedule virtual consultations using Zoom. Doing so will allow CAT team members to talk with you, see you, and also see your computer screen. Email CAT to set up a virtual appointment. You may also send questions via email and request a telephone consultation. Additional information and resources can be found at www.butler.edu/cat.

Visit www.butler.edu/faculty-development for information on future programming opportunities and resources for faculty.
