

Dear Faculty Member,

When asked what I love about Butler, I often refer back to my time here as an undergraduate. I most appreciate the foundation of knowledge that nurtured my professional development and shaped my understanding of the world. Now, as a faculty member, I love the opportunity to work with the highest caliber of students and influence them just as my teachers and mentors did for me.

There are countless reasons to love Butler. What's most important is that we demonstrate our admiration for University, and pride in its students, with a gift to an area that is personally meaningful to us. Many of our colleagues designate their gift to a scholarship of their choice as a way to provide deserving students of all backgrounds with the opportunity to pursue their academic and personal ambitions at Butler. By participating in this year's employee campaign you ensure that Butler can continue to attract and retain high-achieving students and prepare them not just to make a living, but to lead lives of purpose.

Our support provides funding for the education and experiences that generations of students have come to know and love. It also reflects upon the perception of this University and encourages support from our external constituents, particularly our alumni. If they see it at a high percentage of those closest to the University supporting the students, they do too which generates even more resources and experiences that we can provide to our students.

Please, join me in participating in this year's faculty and staff giving campaign.

Thank you in advance,
