

THE DESMOND
TUTU PEACE LAB

"My humanity is bound up in yours, for we can only be human together."

Desmond Tutu Peace Lab at Butler University's Statement and Resources Regarding Recent Police Killings and Confronting Racial Injustice

"Without a struggle, there can be no progress" – Frederick Douglass

"Where justice is denied, where poverty is enforced, where ignorance prevails, and where any one class is made to feel that society is an organized conspiracy to oppress, rob and degrade them, neither persons nor property will be safe" – Frederick Douglass

"Do not be daunted by the enormity of the world's grief. Do justly, now. Love mercy, now. Walk humbly, now. You are not obligated to complete the work, but neither are you free to abandon it" - The Talmud

"Do your little bit of good where you are; it's those little bits of good put together that overwhelm the world" – Desmond Tutu

The Desmond Tutu Peace Lab was created to address conflicts and injustices that are prevalent in the U.S. and beyond, through education, research, dialogue and activism. We are committed to consciousness-raising and education about violence and oppression and to the promotion of nonviolent action for effective, sustained, and transformative systemic changes. Police brutality, racially-motivated violence, and disproportional health disparities are not new, but they have come to wider public attention recently due to the COVID pandemic and the brutal killings of George Floyd, Ahmaud Arbery, and Breonna Taylor. The recent protests and unrest in Indianapolis have been responses to these events and to the killings by police this month of Dreasjon Reed and McHale Rose in our own home city. Many more casualties have been unnamed or forgotten. The responses of protestors reflect the ongoing trauma of many in our community and are rooted in the long term and harmful impact of colonization, slavery, segregation, racial terror, and unequal justice. Recent events call us to act and to consider where we can best serve, given our diverse identities but our collective agency. We recognize that without real and practical knowledge, we can be of little use; so that is our starting point: Here is a suggested reading list, some organizations that we are following, joining, and supporting, as well as guidance on confronting misinformation, protesting and more. We share them with you, our peers and colleagues, in the spirit of peace and solidarity, and encourage you to share them with your networks, read and talk about them with your friends and family, and share with us your own suggestions for further readings and actions.

WHAT CAN WE DO?

I. GET EDUCATED

The New York Time 1619 Project is an important intervention and corrective to the US history you may have been taught, as noted by Jake Silverstein in the introductory essay: “Out of slavery — and the anti-black racism it required — grew nearly everything that has truly made America exceptional: its economic might, its industrial power, its electoral system, its diet and popular music, the inequities of its public health and education, its astonishing penchant for violence, its income inequality, the example it sets for the world as a land of freedom and equality, its slang, its legal system and the endemic racial fears and hatreds that continue to plague it to this day” <https://www.nytimes.com/interactive/2019/12/20/magazine/1619-intro.html>

If your time is short, start with Nikole Hannah-Jones, “The Idea of America.” You can read all of the different essays that are part of the 1619 Project here:

III. HELP CONFRONT MISINFORMATION:

Consult multiple sources.

Document and record your own experiences.

NPR has a good general article on misinformation. <https://www.npr.org/2020/04/17/837202898/comic-fake-news-can-be-deadly-heres-how-to-spot-it>

Seek out first person accounts of protest by following independent media on twitter. For Indianapolis: e.g. <https://twitter.com/shakkirasays>; @breannaNcooper. Please share your favorites!

But also recognize that twitter produces misinformation: See “Misinformation about the extent of unrest in Washington, D.C., surges across Twitter” <https://www.washingtonpost.com/technology/2020/06/01/misinformation-about-extent-unrest-washington-dc-surges-across-twitter/>
