Biographical Sketch

Eliza Blaker was born on March 15, 1854 in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. It was there as a young woman that she began to follow the teachings of Friedrich Froebel, the revolutionary German educationalist who is best known as the originator of the “kindergarten system.” In 1882 the Hadley Roberts Academy invited Blaker to start a kindergarten in Indianapolis, Indiana. She organized the kindergarten under the holistic style of Froebel, educating not only children but also their teachers and parents.

Eliza Blaker believed that kindergarten was a “miniature world in which the little one is happy, is harmoniously developed, and learns to think and act as a reasonable being endowed with a high destiny.” Blaker’s kindergarten program stressed the importance of teaching and parenthood, applying a naturalistic, behavioralistic philosophy to the curriculum. No student was ever turned away from her schools; she believed that all children were equal and as such had equal rights to education, no matter what their ethnicity, gender, religion or socioeconomic background.

Eliza Blaker went on to establish kindergartens in twelve other Indiana cities, and also started a college in Indianapolis to instruct kindergarten teachers. This Teachers College of Indianapolis became affiliated with Butler University in 1929, and is now the College of Education at Butler University. In 1926, Blaker died at the age of 89, after serving as an educator for forty-four years.

The Eliza Blaker Room was opened at Jordan Hall, Butler University in 1943 by members of the Eliza Blaker Club, which was an organization of Blaker’s former students who met to continue the work of their teacher. In 1978 the Eliza Blaker Room was moved to Atherton Union, and in 1991 the room was moved to Irwin Library. Today the remnants of the room are housed along with archival materials relating to Blaker on the third floor of Irwin Library, in the Hugh Thomas Miller Rare Books and Special Collections Room.

Scope and Content Note

The collection contains personal information about and photographs of Eliza Blaker; history of and records from the Teachers College and the Butler College of Education; personal records and photographs of Emma Colbert; records of the Eliza Blaker Club; records for the Eliza Blaker Room; records of the Eliza Blaker School, Indianapolis Public School No. 55; and obituaries. Materials are arranged chronologically. Of special interest are the speeches of Eliza Blaker, (1908-1924), Eliza Blaker’s biography, and Dawn Robert’s honors thesis which serves as a collection guide for the contents of the Eliza Blaker Room.
